BOOKER WASHINGTON THEATRE HAS GOOD SHOW FULL OF PEP

Playing to "Flap" Ban Limit Nightly. A vaudeville bill full of talent, supported by plenty of pep, is being shown at the Booker Washington Theatre. The show is in full capacity at each show this week.

Wilson and Gosnell, a sister team, have a number of good songs and an original line of humorous conversation. Their best features are "I Wish I Could Sleep Until My Daddy Comes Home" and "No. The team scores a hit.

Laura Smith, a blackface comedienne, makes a decided hit with an original monologue. Although her songs are not new, she has a way of putting them over that gets the crowd to its liking. Her dancing also was applauded.

Montgomery and McCallin, a sister team, have a number of good songs and an original line of humorous conversation. Their best features are "I Wish I Could Sleep Until My Daddy Comes Home" and "No. The team scores a hit.

Next week he will tell the R. W. people about war as it is. He is a clever song and dance artist. One other big act will complete the bill.

The Comet Theatre will show this Saturday, "The Kaiser's Finish," a dramatic climax to "The Great World War," and on Sunday will show "William & Hart in 'Riddle Gawn,' a Western thriller.

Leo, the Magician and Pubeley Harper, the funny acrobat, are now teaming together.

Joe Sines and Popo Warfield are at the Grand this week.

THOMAS NELTON, MUSICIAN, DIES IN CAMP

Wm. Thomas Melton, well known violinist, music teacher and former vaudeville star, who was called to Camp Grant last September, died at the camp October 12, and was buried in the family lot, Shelby, Ark. He was 35. He leaves two brothers, two sisters and a mother. One of the brothers has just returned to his home after visiting St. Louis in an attempt to locate Mr. Melton's trunk. He was unsuccessful and hopes that any one who knows its whereabouts will inform him. His name and address is Chas. L. Melton, 1400 Josephine street, Birmingham, Ala. Or anyone having the above knowledge may communicate with the family.

rate with Leroy Smith, 4267 West Belle, phone Landell 2941W, St. Louis. Melton was well liked in St. Louis.

The workings of a dreaded hereditary disease, shifting from the body to the mind are revealed in the transformation of an apparently careless man into a fighting demon in "Bliss Blood." A thrilling sequel drama shown at the Star Theatre, this Sunday, December 15. No children under 16 will be admitted.

Another strong vaudeville bill has been booked for the Booker Washington Theatre next week. Legge and McGinty, two women, are said to be the highest rated than Cresswell and Bailey were in their prime.

Blaine and Brown, a crack-jack team, are stars in their class. Kid Checkers (Sydney Meyer) is a monomaniac of talent. He was drafted and went to France and was in the battle of Chateau Thierry. He was wounded three times. First, in the knee, was patched up and returned to the battle line; was again wounded in the head and then passed. He was sent home decorated with distinguished service cross.

Next week he will tell the R. W. people about war as it is. He is a clever song and dance artist. One other big act will complete the bill.
